shocking, endearing and devastating. A sperm donor tries to learn about his biological son by befriending his mother, a heartbroken man deals with his wife's Alzheimer's, and a young girl discovers her father's shocking affair. A Ukrainian cleaner snoops through the hotel room she cleans, missing the daughter she only sees on Skype. This is a rollercoaster collection displaying O'Connor's mastery of fiction. Out now

THE WOMAN AT 72 DERRY LANE

Carmel Harrington

Harper Collins

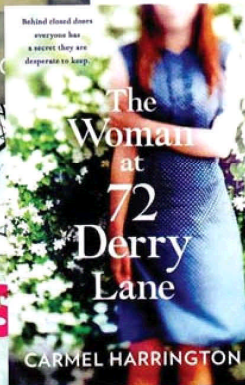

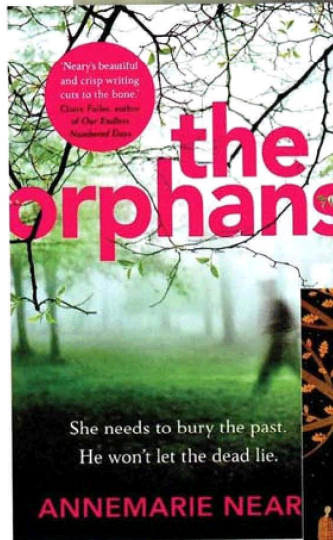

An unlikely friendship develops between the stunning and poised Stella and high-tempered, misfortunate Rea, who the neighbours are always talking about. As the women grow closer they learn that you never really know what is happening behind closed doors, and that everyone has their struggles they'd rather keep hidden. The Wexford-based writer sensitively deals with issues of domestic violence, grief and agoraphobia in a heartwarming and emotional read. Out now

THE ORPHANS

Annemarie Neary

Hutchinson

The Northern Irish writer has created a thriller as gripping as her recent novel Siren. When Jess was eight her parents vanished while she and her brother played at a beach. Years later Jess has built a life for herself as a mother and a lawyer, a life she is fiercely protective of, but her brother is obsessed with their past. When evidenced emerges that suggests their mother is alive, her brother accuses Jess of knowing more than she claims, and everything she loves is put in jeopardy. 27 July

THE SUMMER OF IMPOSSIBLE THINGS

Rowan Coleman

Ebury

When dealing with her mother's affairs after her death, Luna discovers secrets that have been closely guarded for 30 years. Travelling to Brooklyn, where her mother grew up, something unbelievable happens and Luna is transported back to 1977, finding herself face to face with her mother as a young woman. Luna desperately wants to save her mother from the path that led to her taking her own life, but by doing so, she risks sacrificing her own.
